

Ed Dandridge

Chair of the Board of Directors, Susan G. Komen®

Ed Dandridge serves as executive vice president and chief marketing & communications officer at AIG, supporting AIG businesses around the world in advancing the organization's global brand and strategically positioning businesses for continued growth and profitability.

Ed is a recognized business leader with a 30+ year track record of joining executive management teams of leading global companies at critical points of transition, working closely with CEOs and boards of directors to help reshape their market positioning and reputation among key stakeholders.

He has worked in senior leadership roles across industries from government and public affairs to marketing and advertising, media, and communications, with C-level roles at Fortune 500 companies, including Boeing, AIG, Marsh & McLennan and Nielsen.

In addition to serving as chair of the National Board of Directors of Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation, Ed serves on the President's Advisory Committee of the Philadelphia Fed, and was formerly president and CEO of the NAIC and vice chair of the Executive Leadership Council (ELC).

Since 2010, he has been repeatedly recognized as one of the "Top 100 Most Influential Blacks in Corporate America" by Savoy Magazine.
